

EXPECTATIONS AT THE BREMAN

It is emotionally difficult for the Speakers to talk about their painful memories. Many of them could not talk about their, or their parents', Holocaust experiences for many years. But a Holocaust Speaker will share his or her story with you during your visit to the Breman Museum.

It is for you, the next generation and the future, that they are willing to remember and are determined to tell what they, or their parents, witnessed during the period of the Holocaust.

Be respectful of the Docents (guides) and Speakers. Being respectful means behaving well and paying attention to Docents and Speakers.

Remember that your Speaker may have a heavy accent, so listen carefully to his or her important message.

Explore the museum with your eyes, not your hands.

Move quietly through the museum so that everyone has an opportunity to hear the Docent and view the exhibit.

Ask questions. Your participation, understanding and interest are important to us.

Never forget! Your vigilance is needed to help prevent prejudice, discrimination and injustice.
